Social Advocates for Youth

2016-2017 REPORT TO INVESTORS

Letter from your Chief Executive Officer

Dear Friend, Investor, and Advocate,

As I look back on our 2016-2017 fiscal year, I find myself in awe of the work we have done together. Together, we helped 242 young people find safe and stable housing, connected 495 youth to job readiness and work experience opportunities, and provided more than 1,300 students with mental health support in Sonoma County schools. And that's just scratching the surface of all we were able to accomplish because you cared about and invested in the most vulnerable young people in our community. The amazing growth and programmatic outcomes you will learn about in the following pages were truly only possible because of your support, and we are deeply grateful for your steadfast commitment to empowering our youth to become their best selves.

Your investment in Social Advocates for Youth allowed our staff to devote their time and talent thoughtfully and skillfully every day to provide the best services possible for each young person we serve. Because you chose to be a caring adult, you've helped change the life trajectory of more than 8,000 children, youth, and families needing our programs and services. However, your impact will extend far beyond this fiscal year. Even though our youth may not know you by name, they will feel your collective impact when they successfully finish high school, secure their first job, engage in healthy relationships, or have a warm safe place to call home every night.

In service for the kids,

Katrina

Sonoma County youth

have amazing, diverse, and ambitious dreams. They want to grow up and make a difference in the world. Though they play a foundational role in our shared future, growing numbers of local youth are disconnected, hopeless, and cannot see a clear path to success. A disproportionate number are vulnerable due to past trauma. Social Advocates for Youth's (SAY) programs and services help youth build resiliency by offering support, opportunities, and hope to empower them to thrive as healthy, self-sufficient adults who positively engage with our community and contribute to the local workforce and economy.

Housing

SAY's housing continuum is comprised of several different types of programs that all share one common goal: to empower youth experiencing homelessness and housing instability to achieve self-sufficiency and find safe, permanent housing. In Sonoma County 25% of the homeless population is under the age of 25 and these young people are vulnerable to sexual exploitation, violence, trauma, and serious mental and physical health issues.

In the 2016-2017 fiscal year 242 youth found a safe place to live at a SAY housing program. During the coldest months of the year, we housed an additional 50 young people to shelter them from life-threatening weather conditions.

These are our young people:

93% of youth that received SAY housing services were born in Sonoma County.

SAY's shelter programs get young people off the streets and out of unsafe, unstable living conditions with the ultimate goal of connecting them to long-term stable housing. Typically, youth enter into our shelter programs via SAY's Street Outreach Program that travels throughout the county to find and support young people experiencing homelessness. Our Street Outreach team served 1,202 of the most vulnerable young people living on the streets by providing basic needs supplies, referral services, and housing support.

In order for SAY to work you must want the help, it isn't forced. SAY is not a free ride. It's a program designed and built around freedom of choice. It's a safety-net for those wanting to better themselves in life.

“ Stable housing means I get to have a safe and comforting home. The streets are crazy, and SAY housing allows me to live my life fully without being afraid.”

- Street Outreach Services
- Coffee House Teen Shelter
- SAY Finley Dream Center Short-Term Shelter
- SAY Finley Dream Center Winter Shelter
- The Mary and Jose Tamayo Village
- SAY Finley Dream Center Long-Term Housing
- Master lease agreements in the community

Housing Continuum

Young people living in a SAY housing program agree to actively work on their lives. That means they commit to obtain or maintain employment and/or enroll in school, save 80% of their income for future living expenses once they leave SAY, and learn how to be self-sufficient with the support of case management and wrap around mental health and employment services. 72% of our residents increased their income while living with SAY and 70% are working, in school, or both.

Counseling

According to the National Institute of Mental Health, 20% of youth in the United States have a diagnosable mental health condition and need counseling services. Here in our community, SAY provides counseling services to children, youth, and their families with the ultimate goal of improving the functioning, mental health, and overall wellbeing of our clients. SAY counseling services are offered on-site at the SAY Finley Dream Center clinic, at satellite sites in the community, in clients' homes, and in schools across Sonoma County. In the 2016-2017 fiscal year, we supported

2,348 youth and families with mental health services.

Our clinicians engage youth and families using multiple modalities, including cognitive behavioral therapy,

Functional Family Therapy, and trauma-informed therapy. These techniques help the therapist, client, and family work together to solve problems and foster healthy relationships. In our counseling clinic, 70% of youth reported they were getting along better with their families, doing better in school, sleeping better, and were better able to care for themselves after receiving services.

SAY school-based mental health clinicians teach proven tools to help youth feel stronger, more hopeful, and better able to care for themselves.

1,312 students in 27 schools throughout Sonoma County received mental health and wellness services. At the end of the school year:

I have been working on my anger and I don't get as mad anymore. I don't punch walls anymore. I don't yell as much anymore. One big thing I learned is when you're mad taking big breaths can help you with that.

– High School Student, 14 years old

After going to therapy at SAY, my kids seem more comfortable and relaxed, and they are laughing more!

97% reported that the clinician was helpful, 71% reported they were doing better in school and homework, and 80% reported they were better able to help themselves because of learning self-care and therapy tools!

SAY Grief Services meets the needs of grieving youth in Sonoma County by offering no-cost clinician-lead support groups, school-based programming, emergency response, and resource referrals. During this fiscal year, SAY supported 496 young people struggling with grief after a major loss or death of a loved one.

youth and families accessed SAY counseling services across these programs:

- Clinic-based Individual + Family Therapy
- Home-based Therapy
- Sand Tray Therapy
- Art Therapy
- Play Therapy
- Grief Services
- School-based Mental Health Services

Counseling Continuum

SAY counseling services are offered on-site at the SAY Finley Dream Center clinic, at satellite sites in the community, in clients' homes, and in schools across Sonoma County. In the 2016-2017 fiscal year, we supported 2,348 youth and families with mental health services.

Career Services

In Sonoma County, 10.7% of 16 to 24 year-olds are disconnected from education and employment (2017 Measure of America). Research shows that youth experiencing periods of disconnection are more likely to engage in risky behaviors, are at risk of victimization by adults, earn less income, and face higher rates of incarceration and unemployment. SAY Career Services' goal is to empower youth on the path to self-sufficiency and a brighter future by implementing research and evidence-based programming specifically designed to increase connections and decrease barriers to gainful employment.

During the 2016-2017 fiscal year, SAY helped 285 youth become workforce ready through professional development workshops.

An additional 210 youth were connected to meaningful paid work experience opportunities in Sonoma County.

Evidence suggests that students who engage in experiences that connect school learning to the real world are more likely stay in school and become college and career ready.

During this fiscal year, 3,943 students across six Santa Rosa City schools participated in SAY's College and Career Readiness program. In this program students participated in mock interviews, professional development workshops, industry panel and networking opportunities, and in-depth tours of local businesses.

really appreciate having someone to talk to at school about what I want to do for a career. No one at home supports my dream, so it's really hard to know how to be successful and get my ideal job.

Being able to talk to my case manager about family, friends, and school is really helpful. Whenever I think about doing something that might get me into trouble, I know I can call SAY and they will help me make the right choice.

Careers Continuum

During the 2016-2017 fiscal year, SAY helped 4,862 youth in Sonoma County become college and workforce ready by removing barriers to academic success and gainful employment.

One Cold Night 2016

November 18, 2016 marked SAY's inaugural One Cold Night. This experiential event utilized a peer-to-peer fundraising model to leverage the power of personal networks and social media to spread awareness and support for ending youth homelessness in Sonoma County. Each participant, known as a sleeper, committed to sleeping outside the SAY Finley Dream Center for one night while raising funds that went directly to getting kids off the streets and into SAY's continuum of services.

The 2016 class of sleepers were local executives, rising young professionals, community leaders, and elected officials who have a passion for giving youth a voice and the tools to achieve self-sufficiency. Together they raised for the most vulnerable young people in Sonoma County.

$180,000

Hope Society

The SAY Hope Society is a group of dedicated advocates who have committed to supporting the youth we serve for at least five years. Often, the young people who come to us are processing years of trauma or abuse and need more than a single service or visit to our offices. Every youth we serve has a unique set of needs that require flexible funding to support them. SAY pledges to be there for these youth for their entire journey to self-sufficiency, and multi-year investments are critical to helping support services and operations so we can live up to our promise. Hope Society members pledge to stand by our youth, telling them that they are an important part of our community for the long run.

Corporate Partners

Corporate partnerships ensure the long-term sustainability and continued impact of SAY's housing, counseling, and career services. These partnerships allow SAY flexible funding, allowing us to invest in the strategy, operations and staffing we need to have the greatest impact. Whether through budget-relieving trade agreements, event and program sponsorships, or third-party fundraising initiatives, we are strategically aligned with some of the top businesses in our community.

Foundations

Connection and self-sufficiency are possible when youth are provided individualized, appropriate, and compassionate supportive services and programs. Our foundation partners recognize the importance of operating and programmatic funding opportunities and we are proud to partner with these private institutions as we move away from reliance on government contracts..

Community + Government Partners

As the leading youth service provider in the region, SAY does not duplicate the work of others, but collaborates with many local community and government agencies to offer an unrivaled continuum of services.
 Our contracts and partnerships with these agencies allow SAY to provide services where and when young people need us most while maintaining fiscal sustainability.
